Overdose Deaths:

For current statistics on NJ Opioid related deaths and Narcan/Naloxone reversals
www.NJCARES.GOV

Naloxone is a safe and effective prescription medicine that is used to reverse an opioid overdose. Opioids include heroin and prescription pain medications. A bystander can safely and legally spray naloxone into the nose or inject it into a muscle. The "Good Samaritan Law" is a component of the "Opioid Antidote and Overdose Prevention Act" which provides legal protections, both civil and criminal, to the overdose victim and the person who administers the naloxone. After Naloxone is administered call 911 and stay with the individual.
